

Women's Dorms Filled, No More Are Accepted

Barracks, Orphanage Are Possible Housing

Further applications from women wishing to enter the University this fall cannot be accepted unless they are able to make arrangements to live in private homes, President Herman L. Donovan announced last Saturday.

All residence halls for women, sorority houses and other rooming facilities of the University are filled, with single rooms being shared by two girls and double rooms by three or four, Dr. Donovan explained. The office of the dean of women has a waiting list of approximately 100 girls wanting rooms for the fall quarter.

Army Barracks
The University is arranging for three army barracks to be set up in front of Patterson hall for the purpose of housing women war veterans attending the University. Facilities will be available for forty-eight women under this plan, but officials have expressed doubt that the barracks will be ready for occupancy by September.

Dr. Donovan said that negotiations had been attempted for the rental of the Odd Fellows home on Sixth street. If leased, the present orphanage could house about 200 co-eds, and arrangements could be made to take care of the 20 children now at the home. However, there has been no announcement concerning the present orphanage.

In the meantime, Dean of Women Sarah B. Holmes has requested that all Lexington householders contact her office if they have rooms that could be rented to women students during the coming school year.

Platters For WBKY?

You'll probably break them trying to get them home, so why not donate them to the WBKY studios? Phonograph records, that is.

If you are leaving school, and have any type of records you don't want, or can't take, just take the cumbersome things up to the studios on the top floor of McVey. WBKY needs them, and you have them.

'The Cooperstown' Serves Families In Housing Project

Cooperstown, the University's housing project for veterans, is rapidly growing into a community with its own set-up, which includes mayor and councilmen. Additional evidence of its independence lies in the fact that residents recently began publication of a newspaper, now known as "The Cooperstown."

This paper, which reaches its readers every other Wednesday, first appeared on March 20, and was called "The Newsheet." As the publication progressed from one to an average of four mimeographed pages, an attempt was made to select a more suitable title.

A name was chosen from suggestions submitted by members of the community, and the paper was first heralded as "The Cooperstown" on April 24.

Articles are turned in to Z. S. (Dick) Dickerson editor, and Mrs. Joe T. Mullins, assistant editor, by council members who collect material from residents of various sections.

The two main purposes of the paper, Mr. Dickerson says, are (1) to give the people of Cooperstown an opportunity to get official information from their council, and (2) to help co-ordinate the work of the University with that of the project.

"The Cooperstown" also carries in each edition society news, birth announcements, a section for welcoming new residents to the community, and advertisements concerning any object the townspeople wish to trade, buy, or sell. The editor has announced that in the future the names of new residents and their addresses will be published each month. By doing this he believes that it will simplify matters in keeping the town's directory up-to-date.

In addition to being sent to all colleges having similar veterans' quarters, the "C-Town" paper goes to twenty departments at the University and to the Lexington Herald-Leader. A number of students mail copies home to their families, and one Irish bride sends her paper as far as Belfast, North Ireland.

Supplies for the Cooperstown publication are furnished by the University, and thus far residents have been receiving the paper free of charge.

Geography Dept. Plans Field Trip

Twenty-five students and faculty of the University are planning a month-long geographical field trip to Mexico this summer. Prof. Joseph R. Schwendeman, head of the University geography department and organizer of the annual trip, announced today.

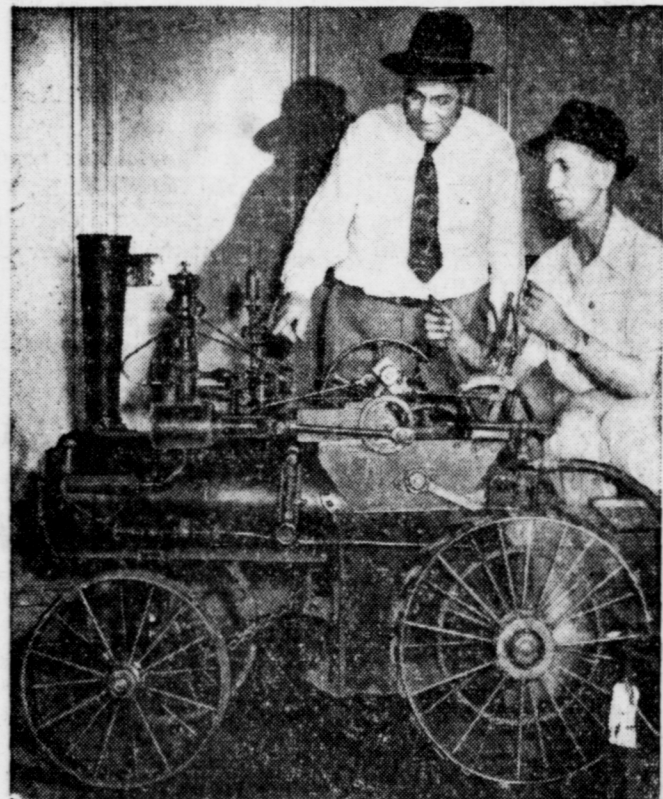

The tour, which will be made by automobile, is scheduled to leave July 26 and return August 23. Plans are to take a direct route to Laredo, Texas, and then head south of the border making frequent stops to observe areas of geographical interest. Taxco, Mexico, 900 miles south of the Rio Grande river, will be the farthest point south reached by the group this year, Prof. Schwendeman said.

UK Dames To Meet At Maxwell Place

The UK Dames, University club for veterans' wives, will hold its regular meeting at 7:30 p. m. Wednesday on the lawn at Maxwell Place.

The program will consist of the reading of the play, "I Remember Mama," by Mrs. Charlotte Wallace, Mrs. Dorothy Potter, Mrs. Nadine Francis, Mrs. Vera DeWitt, Mrs. Phyllis Tuggle, and Mrs. Maxine Pulliam.

The Dames will have as their special guests those women who have been members of similar organizations at other colleges.

Curtis East, right, Jessamine county machine works owner, spent six months building the scale model tractor engine which he has presented to the College of Engineering. Acting Dean D. V. Terrell, left, accepted the engine for the college.

Haggin Fund Use Approved By Dummit

Stating that he knew of "no public policy that would prohibit the use of the Haggin fund . . . in supplementing teachers salaries" at University, Attorney General Eldon S. Dummit approved transfer of money from the private Haggin fund Saturday.

An opinion prepared for President H. L. Donovan by Dummit explained that the state constitution limits state salaries to $5,000 a year, except that of the governor.

Because the Haggin fund is private, it may be used to supplement University salaries, Dummit said. In regard to professors leaving the University because of inadequate salaries, Dr. Donovan told Dummit, "We have just lost one of our ablest teachers to Tulane University. Every week or ten days, one of our best men slips away and I nearly always have to replace him with someone less promising than he is."

G. R. Page, quality control engineer for the Western Electric company, Baltimore, interviewed approximately 17 seniors of the August and December graduating classes interested in manufacturing engineering Wednesday, Dean D. V. Terrell, of the College of Engineering, said yesterday.

Page was graduated from the University in 1924 in mechanical engineering, and was a member of Tau Beta Pi. He has been with Western Electric, manufacturers of communications equipment for the Bell Telephone system, since graduation.

Penrod Takes Over As Department Head

Estel B. Penrod, graduate of Purdue and Cornell universities, has assumed duties as head of the Department of Mechanical Engineering, Acting Dean D. V. Terrell of the Engineering college has announced.

Prof. Penrod holds the B.S., M.E., and M.S. degrees from Purdue and a master of mechanical engineering degree from Cornell. He has instructed in physics at Purdue and Western Reserve universities and was head of the department of physics at Michigan's Hillsdale college from 1924 to 1942.

Officers Meeting

All men who held a commission in the Army or Navy are requested to meet at 7 p. m. today in room 401, Biological Sciences building, Dr. David R. Lincome announced today.

Invitation to Reading Will Present Briggs

Mr. Wallace N. Briggs, Guignol director, will be the featured speaker on the second "Invitation to Reading" program, to be held on July 16 at 4 p. m. in the browsing room of the library. His subject will be "Current Theatre—William Saroyan."

Director of Guignol since 1944, Mr. Briggs received his A.B. and M.A. degrees from the University, and is now an instructor of speech and dramatics in the English department.

Concerning Saroyan as a modern American dramatist, Mr. Briggs says he is "a playwright who deals always with the humble and the downtrodden . . . he colors his characters with poetry and gives to both characters and plays alike an unreal and dream-like quality."

The "Invitation to Reading" series, now in its seventh season, was originated by University library staff members to help students get acquainted with the library as a source of pleasure. Staged as informal get-togethers, the programs are designed to present the library as a source of interest rather than as a research laboratory.

Dean Taylor Elected To NEA Committee

Dr. William S. Taylor, dean of the College of Education at the university, has been elected to membership on the executive committee of the National Education association, University officials announced Monday.

The national convention of the NEA, last week in Buffalo, N.Y., chose Dean Taylor to serve a three-year term on the committee. He has held several high posts in the association, including national director from 1933 to 1939 and chairman of the committee on reorganization from 1934 to 1937.

Anthropology Museum Adds Displays For Visitors In Fall

The Museum of Anthropology and Archeology is not open to the public this summer, according to Dr. Charles E. Snow, associate professor of those departments, while its exhibits are being rearranged, and new displays are being added for visitors in the fall.

The museum's collections of skulls and skeletons of ancient man, his tools and weapons, are to portray the pre-history of Kentucky.

In the basement of the museum, Dr. Snow is doing research, measuring bones and skulls of the earliest Kentuckians, and collecting data concerning their structures. There will be general exhibitions of historic relics. In the side rooms cornering the main hall displays

Engine Given To University

Hand-built by a Jessamine county man for his son 15 years ago, a scale model steam traction engine was presented to the College of Engineering this week, and will eventually become a featured display in the proposed engineering museum.

Six months of labor went into the small engine, which was built by Mr. Curtis East, Nicholasville, and donated to the University last Saturday. Prof. D. V. Terrell, acting dean of engineering, accepted the gift.

Mr. East, a machine works owner, said that he built the engine for his son in 1930. Because his son is now a grown man, recently released from the Navy, Mr. East decided to offer the engine to the engineering college, where it could be taken care of properly.

According to Dean Terrell, the engine represents a type of tractor power that was in use 50 years ago, long before the advent of the automobile. The scale model, a one-horsepower engine with a pressure capacity of 150 pounds, is 64 inches long and weighs 675 pounds. All parts—wheels, pistons, gears, valves—were made by Mr. East.

The small model, at present housed on the ground floor of the engineering building, is complete in every detail.

"When Mr. East offered us the engine," said Prof. Terrell, "I told him I would like to see it running. So he drove it up here Saturday and we rode all around the campus on it."

Mr. East stated that he was offered a large sum for his scale model engine, but he refused to sell it. He preferred rather to give it to someone who could appreciate its history and take care of it.

Final Legion Meet Held In Memorial Will Fight Inflation Affecting Veterans

A four day meeting of the American Legion Annual Convention ended Wednesday afternoon with the election and installation of officers in Memorial hall.

At 5 p. m. Wednesday a special meeting was held of all Legionnaires attending the University. Former State Commander Garland Bryant told the veterans of the resolutions which have been adopted affecting the former service men on the campus.

A proposal to help eliminate the increase in prices to veterans on the campus was passed at the special meeting.

The proposal, which was presented by a special committee and passed unanimously, condemns the raise in prices affecting college veterans and asks that all state institutions desiring to raise such prices present the case to the state department of the Legion for study.

Justifiable raises will not be contested but the Legion will try to correct and remedy any raises of which they do not approve.

Business sessions Tuesday opened with the annual report of the national committeeman, William P. Shadon who spoke on the stand of the national organization regarding legislation affecting universal military training and veteran rehabilitation.

The principal speaker of the day was Samuel Long of Dallas, Texas, members of the Legion's national defense committee, who called upon Kentucky Legionnaires to help advance a universal military system.

In the afternoon the Legionnaires saw an Army Air Forces show at Blue Grass field and had a burgo supper at Keeneland race track.

Tuesday night, a large crowd at Stoll field witnessed a drum and bugle corps exhibition and fireworks, by the Legionnaires.

Amxy Will Teach In Art Department

Clifford Amxy, native Kentucky artist, painter, and writer and University graduate in 1931, will join the art department next term, Prof. Edward W. Rannels, department head, announced this week.

Amxy, who will hold an assistant professorship, comes to the University from the University of California at Berkeley, where he has worked toward the doctorate.

A scholarly study written by him, "Towards a Methodology in Art History," appeared in the May College Art Journal.

During the second term of the summer session, Amxy will teach those courses originally assigned to Prof. Rannels, who will be relieved of his teaching duties until the fall quarter.

Miss Wilson outlined the jobs now available in her division and explained the educational leave program for the student child welfare division of the child welfare services. Under this set-up students may take six months graduate training after their first six months on the job as student child welfare workers at a salary of $125 per month while attending school.

Twenty-one reserve officers signed a letter requesting a charter for the establishment of a University chapter of the Reserve Officers Association of the United States at an organization meeting held Friday, Dr. David R. Lincome, newly-elected president, announced.

Col. James Barksdale, vice president of the state department of the ROA, spoke to the group on the objectives of the organization. "The ROA is an association of officers banded together for the purpose of supporting and assisting in the development of a military policy for the United States which shall provide adequate national defense," Colonel Barksdale told the officers.

Major Stanley Bach, executive officer for the Lexington military sub-district, also spoke to the group.

Other new officers are Lt. Stan Skees, vice president; Lt. H. J. Gorman, secretary; Lt. Daniel M. Van Sant, treasurer.

Number Of Married Vets Enrolled Jumps

A marked increase in the number of married veteran students and a decrease in first and second year veterans enrolled at the University of Kentucky for the current term characterize the record breaking veteran enrollment of 2,255, Dr. Lysle Croft, University personnel director, revealed today.

Married veterans total 852, comprise 37 per cent of the total veteran enrollment, and show an increase of 185 over last term, according to Dr. Croft. Nearly 38 per cent of the married G. I. students have children, who total 380.

The current enrollment among freshmen and sophomores makes up 63 per cent of the total veterans, but is considerably less than that of the past term, Dr. Croft stated. First year students show the greatest withdrawal with 125 less, and sophomores 22 less, but there is a general increase in all other classes.

The College of Arts and Sciences has the largest number of veterans enrolled with 713. The Engineering college is second with 543 and the College of Commerce has 373 G. I. students. The College of Agriculture and Home Economics and the Graduate school are next with 234 and 213, respectively. Veteran enrollment in the Colleges of Law and Education are 120 and 60, respectively.

Twenty-five women veterans are included in the total for the current term and 90 per cent of all the G. I. students are Kentucky residents. Only 209 are from out of the state.

University Offers Citizenship Course

A correspondence course in citizenship is now being offered by the University to persons living in the state who wish to become citizens of the United States, according to Louis E. Clifton, director of university extension.

Letters outlining the course are being sent to approximately 150 foreign brides of U.S. servicemen who have taken up residence in Kentucky since the end of the war. The list of names was supplied by the Department of Justice.

Mr. Clifton said the course is designed particularly for those who cannot attend citizenship classes. Its purpose is to help the foreign student understand the governments of the United States and Kentucky, and is being offered in cooperation with the immigration and naturalization service.

C-Town May Get Black-Top Roads

Cooperstown, the much-publicized veteran village is due for some new black top roads if President Herman L. Donovan has his wish. Dr. Donovan stated that he is trying to get the contractors to work on the roads sometime in the near future.

When asked about the future plans for Cooperstown, Dr. Donovan mentioned that he hoped to have two outdoor ovens and several picnic tables erected in the open area east of the observatory. He also hopes to procure some outdoor athletic equipment from the United States War Surplus commission. He emphasized, however, that University funds could not be used for the procurement of this equipment.

Dr. Donovan expressed great admiration for the war veterans and their families had fixed their lawns and the grounds surrounding the individual homes, but showed displeasure over the way cars are indiscriminately driven over the grass and the dirt roads left by the contractors.

Dr. Donovan said that the bare spots left by making roads through the grass did much to destroy the beauty of the area.

Plans to secure some power mowers for Cooperstown did not materialize but the grass and the weeds in the whole area will be cut in a few days, he concluded.

Chamberlain Returns

Dr. Leo Chamberlain, dean of the University, will return this weekend from his vacation in Indiana where he has been since July 3.

WEATHER REPORT

Summer is here and so is hot weather. There is no snow on the ground. It has not snowed for some time now. In fact, there is no snow expected within the near future. Convertibles are in full bloom and shirt sleeves are rolled up to the boiling point. Perspiration is falling like rain—and it represents the only rain recorded in these parts for a week and a half. Rainfall (or sweat fall) recorded yesterday: 2 1/2 inches. This weather is excellent for corn-growers, the bureau reports.

Life, Liberty, and Pursuit

LIFE: You have all read the interesting, yet highly distressing story called the "Mysterious Card!" If you haven't read this, that A you got in Freshman English was a lie. The story tells of a poor fool that accepted a card from some French belle with a few words of French written on it. He carried the card to everyone he knew who could read French; they all obligingly read the words, but gave him a hard way to go, and refused to tell him what was on it. He had all sorts of troubles—his wife divorced him, he was chased out of the country, and treated like any well-known canine.

Just as he was about to die, (on his last leg, that is) he found a man who promised to read the words for him—but as he was taking the card to be read, he was caught in a rain, and the words were washed away.

Now you are probably asking what the (ahem) let's keep this column clean, I am telling you bedtime stories about. Well, here's why. I FOUND A CARD. It has these words written in plain English on the back of an unaddressed postal card: "There's a certain guy going to get a great chew job when a certain other guy sees him again. . . . I assumed the words 'chew job' are army slang (but all veterans refuse to tell me. They just walk away with blank looks on their faces. (In other words, they'll never tell.) I took it to the library and people who sat beside me moved; nobody loves me after they see the card. Now campus, here is my problem—What the hell does it mean?"

Which all reminds me of a poem I wrote all alone in my ratty, foodless garret—it could well apply to the big thrill a gal gets when she sees a man with the Good House-keeping Seal of Approval Tie.

I saw a man who wore a tie, I was so afraid it were a lie Now I met him, I do find, It really do take a tie to bind.

Dear Columnist, I have been terribly confused over an article that appeared in last Friday's Kernel. It seems that there is to be a series of lectures given soon on courtship, husband-wife relationship, and child-parent relationship given by Miss Mary Mumford. What's the score anyway? A confused student. Answer: "Now there is a woman with nerve!"

SIGN OF THE WEEK: The following sign was printed on the back of a very elderly Ford which looked just about ready to fall flat on its—er—chassis: RESPECT OLD AGE.

---- And so there were the maintenance department men, out on campus getting soaked to the skin in the pouring down rain, supervising the machines that were watering the grass. They've got to see that the grass stays green and pretty in spite of the rain. Don't they?

LIBERTY: (1) As I reminded you in last week's column, there is to be an interesting (?) discussion of the Committee for Kentucky this week. Darn it all, anyway, the Courier—a reasonably obscure publication published in Louisville, beat the Kernel to the draw by publishing a complete report on the Committee in their Sunday issue. They explained that the Committee was merely giving everyone a breathing spell after their first campaign. "Wake Up Kentucky." The next campaign, we are afraid, might show that Kentucky woke up with a dark brown taste in its mouth, unless someone gets interested in doing something about our secret sins.

Wouldn't it be possible to set up a statewide publicity board (a bigger and better one, that is) that will have a fearless newspaper editor at its head who isn't afraid to say what he thinks? This board could concern itself more with plain facts about conditions in the state (without the lace, that is) and out-of-state publicity. One of the best means of doing this is through the magazine "In Kentucky," which is sold for 25 cents one everyone's newstands. This fee, we know, is very hands to pay for the cost of publication—but you know as well as I, that it should be free to everyone. Stickers for cars, and license tag attachments are handy devices also. Everyone knows hundreds of ways, and the taxpayers pay for just lots of things. . . . Why not give them something they can see for a change? (2) "I took the lie detector test."

By Adele Denman

"I have gene." "I have motor reflexes." "I have all kinds of drives." This is what the average student has to say when he completes the course in general psychology. But just exactly what has he? Does he know anything about the enlightening benefits of psychology? No, he knows about drives, reflexes, and gene.

Now here is my point. Psychology is a coming field. It can be as interesting as any other study on earth, if not more so. Why don't more people major in psychology on the campus? Because they can't get the appreciation for the whole field of study from the first course in general psychology!

Wouldn't it be possible to insert a humanities course into the department, so that freshmen would know what psychology is all about?

PURSUIT: May I apologize to pursuit lovers for the "long haired" tone of Life and Liberty. (I know it isn't interesting to you, but there are just some little things that have to be said.) Bear with me this time, and something better may come next week.

a. Same Song, Different Tune: Last week Jane Bond had a date with Ben Sullivan.

b. FLASH! (Two more pinnings!) This is a surprise to everyone we know, but Lance Trigg (SN) and Betty Hensley (Delta Zeta) got pinned as well as Bill Hornback (SN) and Ann Birdwell (ADP). This is great Sigma News this week.

c. Jean Henry and C. A. Ryley (Sigma Chi) had a date last Saturday night.

d. Expecting? Charlie Kuhn and Jessie Tunstall will be proud fathers in September.

e. Just a Possibility: Rumor has been running around on its cloven hoofs telling us that Brian Blunt (SEA) wants to pin Ann Creech (Theta).

f. Jewell Hall: Mary Ann Kubes, one of the most popular girls anywhere, has been seen the most with Ed Jones (Delta) and John Young (Sigma Chi). Margaret Dowell is dating Bob Nelson (ATO). If Si Fischer could, he wouldn't get his dates confused—namely Pat Hine and another Jewell gal.

g. Boyd Hall Quip: Bill Fowler and Jo . . . really make the "fondness technique" an art.

"What shall I do?" wailed a sweet young thing. "I've learned that my fiancé cannot bear children!" "Well," comforted the kindly old lady, "you mustn't expect too much of a husband."

A professor, coming to one of classes a little late, found a most uncomplimentary caricature of himself drawn on the board. Turning to the student nearest him, he angrily inquired, "Do you know who is responsible for that atrocity?"

"No, sir, but I strongly suspect his parents."

"What a handsome baby," exclaimed the visitor. "Does he resemble your husband?" "I hope not," replied the wife. "We adopted him."

POST OFFICE BOX

Dear Miss Burnett, "Acting chief of police John L. Sellers late Monday issued a general order to city police to enforce all city ordinances pertaining to noise making after he had received a communication from City Manager Will White.

"The city manager said his office had received 'numerous complaints' of unnecessary noise made by the blowing of automobile horns. He pointed out that ordinances prohibited noise made by bells, horns, musical instruments and other devices, and by shouting. Penalty for violation is from $5 to $20."

The above notice was published in the Lexington Leader July 2, after numerous complaints from citizens all over the city, and particularly from those living in the area of the University such as Harrison avenue, Euclid avenue, South Limestone street, and Maxwell street, and we are taking this opportunity to reach the students driving cars and are asking them to please adhere to these requests from the police department without citizens' having to resort to police protection against this public nuisance.

The harsh sounding of horns and driving with cutouts wide open is a serious menace to the health of the community and greatly disturbs the sick, tired, nervous people and the public in general.

Watch Your Step

Plans have been made to build a fieldhouse, new halls, and dormitories, but as yet no one has complained about the most run-down place on the campus—the McVey hall steps that lead up to the bookstore.

Probably cherished in the memories of many alumni, the worn steps leading up to McVey hall, nevertheless, are dangerous. Their slick, slanting surfaces are threatening to even the veteran climber. A census-taker would probably find that no one graduates from the University without a fall from McVey hall.

The bookish and daydreaming as well as the foolhardy and bold students readily fall victim to the steps. Even the agile football player occasionally missteps.

These steps must have many enemies—the silent, uncomplaining, the bitter victims. Let these silent enemies voice their opinion of the McVey steps in a manner that will lead to action! The University is supposed to be a place of dignity, and no one can be dignified in a recumbent position. These gutted, rounded steps should be squared and filled in to make steps that really are steps.—P. T.

Too often our ideals are something we expect the other guy to measure up to.

Take It Easy!

Three persons have drowned in the Kentucky river during the past week.

For some reason vacation months seem to be in the foreground as danger months. Pleasure seekers perform to time-worn act of throwing caution, and wind takes it farther every year.

The University has been fortunate in having so few accidents this summer. The only major event has been the death of one student in a motorcycle wreck.

University students frequent the beach at Boonesboro; some of them are not so careful as they might be in getting to and from the river. Others are not so careful as they might be while they are in the river.

Automobile and motorcycle riders who do not exercise the common principles of safety endanger not only their own lives but those of other persons.

Summer months are fun months. That's what we want them to be. But let's keep the rate down. Take it easy!

With the world in the shape it is, maybe it would be better if we changed the saying, "be a sport, old man," to "be a man, old sport."

Periodical Room Files Darn' Near Anything

By James Rourke

Silence is tornadic in the trim, prim periodical room of the library, but in spite of sedate mien and summer heat this spot admits more people per day than any other room in the building.

And behind it all, more quiet and efficient than a new gas refrigerator, is a student staff that puts "Time" in its place and keeps "Life" on the proper level.

Curious to know the future of a magazine like "Nevada Grapegrower" in a place like UK, we wandered into the filing department of the periodical room the other afternoon, where we were smiled upon by a slender girl in a cool yellow dress.

"Can I help you?" she said, and we said yes, she could. But when we explained our business, she smiled again and said, "Anne will take care of you. She handles all business like that." Whereupon we were waved along to Anne, a small, brown-haired girl behind a big desk.

Anne is Miss Anne Biggerstaff, home economics major, senior from Lexington, and big boss in the periodical room filing department. Miss Biggerstaff has worked in the library since her days as a University freshman, but she assumed her present position only a short time ago. However, she faces a brief tenure as boss—a short two-year term—because she is acting in place of Miss Elizabeth Hanson, library staff member now on a two-month trip to California.

"Miss Hanson is lucky," said Miss Biggerstaff somewhat wistfully, and we wondered at the sagacity of the Fate who arranges things in the library.

Miss Biggerstaff explained that "Nevada Grapegrower" is on the periodical room files probably because some grape-minded professor wants it that way. The library chooses some of its magazines because students and professors need them in departmental work, others because they are popular with the reading public.

At present there are 1,001 magazines on file in the periodical room. Of these, 827 are sent at the command of the order department and 174 are gift subscriptions. The gift subscriptions come from alumni and professors who think their magazines worthy of attention—and want to make certain they get it.

Not only must the periodical room keep tab on a thousand and one magazines, it must also check on a large number of newspapers from all over the country. Miss Biggerstaff said that she and her co-workers labor over file-cards on 18 nationally known metropolitan papers and a hundred or so county dailies and weeklies. The plight of the Kentucky county publications is particularly pitiable.

"We subscribe to the 18 metropolitan papers," Miss Biggerstaff confided, "but the county papers are sent free of charge by their respective editors. Sometimes a student will come in and ask to

The Variety Show

By HUGH COLLETT

After three weeks of touring through our neighboring state—West By-the-Grace-of-God Virginia—in search for a method to usurp the summer months, we have returned to Lexington and dear old UK, confident that we shall roam no more.

During our free moments away from the big city, we found time to devote to our favorite pastime: poetry writing.

The following words came to us one summer's evening while lounging around on a large, spacious lawn in said neighboring state, with a mint julep in one hand and a Hava-Tampa in the other—simulating, as near as possible, the atmosphere of Ole Kentucky:

The hustle-bustle of the grill at noon.

The colonel's of Governor Ruby Laffoon.

And Dixie's best band playing the same old tune.

These are the things I love.

The Engineering Quad with no air vent.

The Kernel newsroom with its musty scent.

And Bob Hope growing corn for Pepsodent. (We're not doing bad ourselves!) These are the things I love!

Once I thought that math was just an easy course.

My grades were low.

But now, I know that I can never part from this.

To classes I must go.

The Student Union with its pastel hues.

The monthly frat bill with outlandish dues.

And WBKY missing all its cues.

These are the things I love.

THE FIRST effect of inflation has been felt at UK! We had no idea that the filthy thing—inflation, that is—could strike so quietly and so fast. Soon after returning from territory where the surrender of Germany is still headlines, we dropped into the grill to partake of that life-giving flurigeron, commonly advertised as "The pause that refreshes."

We nonchalantly tossed our nickel on the counter and awaited the return of our waitress. She hustled back with said drink (as only a grill waitress can hustle), looked at me, insignificant coin, put her nose so far into the air that she scratched off a large portion of Dr. Rannell's pastel paint, and then said, "Ten cents, please!"

"Ten cents, please!" Those words rang over and over in our musty brain. They resounded. They were deafening. Our blood boiled. Our blood surged through us faster than Grant took Richmond. We were shaken back to reality. We realized that the filthy thing known as INFLATION had struck at our very soul!

"Ten cents, please!" We lost all control of our emotions. We cried. Hysteria enveloped us. Our brain was numb. Our faith was shattered.

"Ten cents, please!" GAD! (There will be no rise in the price of penny postal cards within the next few days, according to Postmistress Carrie Bean.)

Being in dire need of the coke—we hadn't had one for three weeks—we reluctantly doubled the ante, took our little morsel of gola water and collapsed in the nearest chair.

After swallowing a few ounces of the fluid, our vim and vigor returned to us. Our emotions were again stable. We were once again able to control our thoughts.

We were bound to get to the bottom of this affair. Our feet swiftly carried us to the common office, where we encountered Miss Trigg, the lady in charge of said commons, and the person responsible for the 100% raise in coke prices.

We managed to keep our reserve long enough to ask her the reasons behind this price hike, and in an effort to set the student body straight, we shall endeavor to recall her answer and explanation.

"There has been no rise in prices in the cafeteria nor the grill," she began. "Bottled cokes are a new item in our sales." She went on to explain that the grill has no facilities to handle bottled drinks—especially in the large numbers that are necessary to keep the students in cokes—and, as a consequence, it is necessary to serve them with ice and a paper cup. Any business place must make some profit, she continued, and no profit can be made by selling a coke, ice, and a large paper cup for five cents—in fact, the five cent sale of these cokes would "make us lose money."

"We have undertaken the sale of bottled cokes not because we want an out to charge the students additional prices, but because, if we do not serve bottled cokes, we would have soft drinks to last us for only a few hours." When explaining this situation to another person, we received the following reply: "What about the book store? They only charge a nickel, and they must cover the price of numerous lost bottles—a loss that would more than override the costs of ice and paper cups."

Once again, our mind was dumb. We leave it up to the student body to judge for itself.

Some time ago, we started a little campaigning that has turned into a verbal battle on the pages of the Kernel. We are speaking of our efforts to bring tradition to UK. The controversy has been taken up by the editors in recent editorials and by Columnist Orman Wright.

Perhaps we are wrong in our beliefs concerning tradition, but we should like to challenge Columnist Wright to give his definition of tradition.

The rest are bound and sent to what might be termed magazine heaven. This binding of magazines also has its problems, since each bound volume must be balanced page for page to see that none of it is missing, and that no extraneous material has seeped into a particular volume.

"Take the magazine 'American Cookery' for instance," said Miss Biggerstaff. "Its volume runs from January to December. Now, right here in the middle of July, they've changed its name to 'Better Food.' I don't know what we're going to do about it; we'll just have to change everything."

All magazines are bound and sent to the stacks department, but of the newspapers only The Kernel, the New York Times, and the Louisville Courier-Journal are so preserved. Some of the more popular magazines are too worn to meet binding requirements, so duplicates of these publications are held in reserve.

According to Miss Biggerstaff, the most popular magazine in the periodical room seems to be "Life," judging only from the wear and tear it receives. Close behind "Life" are the aviation magazines. During the last few months, however, the home magazines have climbed in popularity, due either to the fact that many of the returning veterans are married—or to the fact that persons who can't find houses like to look at pictures of them.

And some persons like the pictures so much they carry the magazines away with them, causing an additional amount of work because the publications are hard to replace. According to the filing room staff, a particularly light fingered bunch are the summer school students. This breed, when told that they cannot take the magazines from the reading room, take them anyway.

In fact, as we departed, the smiling girl in the cool yellow dress was barricaded behind a desk, eyeing everyone who fanned the door.

Wright or Wrong

By Orman Wright

About two weeks ago I devoted about half of this column to a few of my ideas about tradition. Last week there appeared in the Kernel an editorial which opposed almost everything I had said. I think the editorial was way off base in most of its views and opinions and I would like to explain why.

First off, let me summarize succinctly what I tried to say in my earlier column. I agreed that tradition was a necessary and desirable part of college life. However, I advanced the view that tradition should be soft-pedaled somewhat since there were so many other things that needed and merited our attentions and efforts. I tried to show how the war had created a tremendous backlog of students and that it was the University's main purpose to provide for them as adequately and as quickly as it possibly could. I also advanced the opinion that manufactured tradition is worthless and undesirable in itself.

Now let's look at last week's editorial. The editorial's author starts off with a nice attempt to completely obscure the issue. In the first paragraph he lumps George Washington, the Pilgrim Fathers at Plymouth rock, and the Declaration of Independence under the general heading of tradition. George Washington was a personality. The Declaration of Independence is a document. And Plymouth rock? Well, that's a rock that the canny Yankees have turned into a veritable goldmine (which is a nice trick if you can do it). In the next paragraph the author of the editorial makes a very nice play on the reader's emotions. He makes a few statements that are obviously ridiculous and

The editorial did have something to say in the last paragraph and I would like to quote a part of it. "School spirit actually is a characteristic of most universities. It is an aspect of college life. It isn't the most important one, nor is it the least important, but it matters just the same." I suppose that is pretty generally my view of the whole thing.

I thought the bunting draped over the front of Memorial hall the first part of this week looked tawdry and out of place. What did you think?

Not Brooklyn, Not Boston, But Panama

"She must be from Brooklyn." "No, I'll bet she's from Boston."

We were trying to decide where one of the girls in our psychology class was from. We learned we were all wrong. When asked, Mrs. Erna Presley, as her name turned out to be, was from the Republic of Panama.

The Spanish influence was responsible for the quality of her speech which had brought about the inquiry. She has spoken Spanish and Hungarian since childhood, and had only started learning English in high school. Her mastery of English is excellent for such a short time, in fact, it is remarkable, since she was mistaken for a New Yorker.

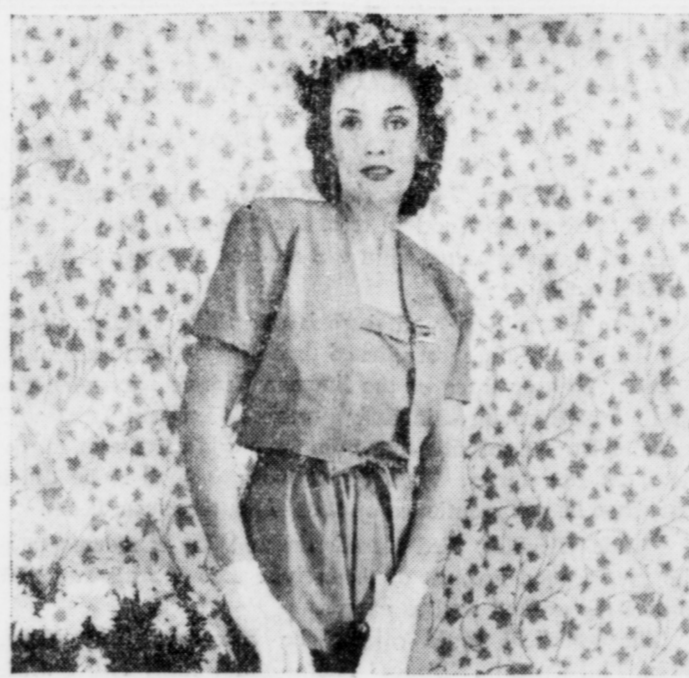

Mrs. Presley's parents came from Budapest, Hungary, 25 years ago, and settled in Colon, Panama, where she was born. When she was twelve years old, she went to Budapest with them, for a visit. Since then she has traveled to Colombia, Guatemala, and Costa Rica.

The war is directly responsible for Mrs. Presley's being at the University. An army doctor, Lieutenant James Weir, from Louisville, became acquainted with her while stationed in Panama. He recommended the University when she had graduated from high school, and was considering coming to the states to attend college.

Husband Is New Yorker
Her husband is in the transportation corps of the Army. They met, and were married in Panama. He is from New York. Upon his release from the service, he will attend the University of Illinois, and she probably will transfer, so that they can be together.

Being married to an American, Mrs. Presley can become an American citizen merely by applying for her final papers, which she plans to do next October.

At left is a cape that slips on over the head and buttons onto the belt of the wide-shouldered sun dress. Brief bolero (right) covers all bareness when it is worn over the low-necked halter sun dress with full skirt. In the cut at left is seen a dress termed "summer solution" because it keeps the wearer comfortable on hot days. Without jacket, it is a sun dress. With the jacket it is suitable for city wear.

Wolff. "It has been said that one could commit a crime on the 14th of July and never be punished for it. Even the police do not work."

Paris, indeed, deserves its cognomen of "city of light" on this day. All public buildings and statues are equipped with facilities for outside lighting and are illuminated.

The Champs Elysees and the Place de la Concorde form a brilliant T. The Champs, lighted by two rows of lights, begins at the Arc de Triomphe and opens out into the Place. The cross-bar of the T is formed by the Chamber of Deputies and the Madeleine.

Instead of private fireworks as we have in this country, the City of Paris and other municipalities arrange magnificent displays which can be seen for miles around.

The manufacture of fireworks for this special day is an industry in itself.

When this holiday occurs during the week, the celebration lasts for one day. But when it falls on a weekend, as it does this year, the merrymaking begins on the night before and continues "as long as the people can take it"—probably through Monday.

France Celebrates Her 4th Of July

By Marjorie Taylor

Bastille Day, "the French Fourth of July," is celebrated in France more like New Year's Eve in this country than the "glorious fourth," according to Thomas G. Wolff, arts and sciences junior who came over from France about five years ago.

July 14—Bastille Day—is the anniversary of the day in 1789, when the third estate—the French people—razed the Bastille, the king's political prison. It is the highest official holiday.

The destruction of the Bastille was symbolical of the downfall of tyranny. There were seven prisoners at the time.

Drinking, confetti throwing, and street dancing characterize the celebration. The people, rich and poor, dance in the streets to musette bands, and general good will is the only law.

Last week we devoted this column to informing the students as to the possibility of losing their tennis captain for next year, Al Reynolds, who has been termed by experts as the best tennis player ever to attend the University. We went on in the column to encourage the Athletic department to keep Al at Kentucky and offered suggestions for a possible solution to the problem.

Since it appeared hopeless that we could give Al a scholarship to compare with those offered by Michigan State and other schools desiring Al to play tennis for them, we suggested hiring Al as a player-coach. This suggestion we would like to back down on now and ex-them to be used for tennis. One scholarship for minor sports wouldn't be enough anyhow. There are others like Al in tennis as well as baseball, track, and golf, who deserve a scholarship for their athletic ability. Why should football or basketball players be the only ones to receive encouragement to participate in sports?

Maybe the fault lies in the Southeastern conference rules committee. Is 75 scholarships enough for one school? We say yes for basketball and football—the major sports. But how about allotting each school additional scholarships for minor sports, with strict rules against anyone playing basketball or football who is going to school on one of the scholarships for the minor sports.

Following the last Southeastern athletic directors and coaches conference basketball tournament, of the various schools seemed to realize that basketball needed a boost in the conference, and they immediately took steps to improve the brand of ball. Well, in order to compete with other conference schools, they not only are going to have to improve their basketball teams, but also their baseball, track, golf, tennis, and swimming teams.

At a time like this when we are trying to build up our football team we really need more than 60 gridiron scholarships, and thus couldn't be expected to give up one for tennis. And 15 scholarships is little enough for us to maintain a nation-leading basketball team on, thus we can't expect one of

But in the meantime we still stand the possibility of losing our tennis captain and star to another school, unless something is done soon to prevent it. Again we point out that the publicity his playing would bring to the old alma mater, now at a time when we're in the process of rejuvenating our football team, and publicity of a sports nature is helpful, would be worth something.

So we still say: TAKE TIME OUT AND THINK IT OVER BOYS, MAYBE YOU'LL FIND A RABBIT IN THAT HAT YET.

Intramurals

By Don B. Towles

Intramural sports, as far as softball is concerned are at the climax point. The three sports carried on during the summer months, softball, tennis and golf are well on the way to the final round. Intramural coach Bill McCubbin announced that the softball elimination tournament will begin Monday. This will decide who will be University champion for the first summer term.

The round robin tournament has been going on for the past several weeks and during this period, all the teams have had the opportunity to see the weaknesses and strong points of the opponents, as well as get in plenty of practice for the coming tournament. The tournament schedule shows that there will be many close contests and that the winning team will have to be a strong one to get to the top rank.

Elimination tournament will start Monday and run through Thursday unless rain delays the play. Games will be played according to the schedule appearing on this page.

Coach McCubbin said that Intramural golf and tennis were lagging behind and urged all those

THE FOOTBALL TEAM

...as Jim Baskett sees it

(Spts. Ed. Note: This week the views and opinions of the rejuvenated Kentucky football team are those of James S. Baskett, a Kernel sports reporter. Jim was student manager of the 1945 baseball team.)

When fall rolls around there is one thing certain: the Cats will field one of the most spirited teams in the Southeastern Conference. Two or three of the linemen deserve particular praise for their performances in early practices. Leonard Preston, 215 pounder from Louisville, has been very aggressive and seems to me a definite starter. Wash Serini looks as good as he did last year when he was mentioned on the All-Southeastern Team.

"Junie" Richter, Ted Kazmierski and Jay Rhodemeyre will also give a good account of themselves. Leo Yarutis and "Hut" Jones have worked well as guards.

The backfield could capably be commanded by Norman Klein, Phil Cutchin, "Dopey" Phelps and Johnny Hurst while a second team of Harry Uliniski, Ermal Allen, Johnny Meihaus and Bill Moseley might well be considered as strong. I think Dennis Rice is the most promising of the freshmen backfield prospects as he packs 190 pounds and can kick, pass and run like a veteran.

Of course, there are other men who I think show promise. Some of these are: George Sengel, Don Ridge, Bill Dawson, Bob Beeler, Bob Green, "Red" Bean, "Doc" Farrell, Jim Wright, Bob Drury and Jim Murphy among the linemen. In the backfield Bill Chambers, Jesse Tunstall, "Bobo" Farris, Sonny Jones, Carroll Jacobs and Jim Babb have worked well.

While I was serving in the Armed Forces in Berlin, Germany, last year, I saw Phil Cutchin lead a powerful 3rd. Infantry Regiment to a win over the 82nd. Airborne Division, 19-18. Cutchin did everything; he passed to one touchdown, plunged to another and kicked the game winning point. Phil is an all around ball player whom I feel sure will play an important role this fall.

Johnny Meihaus and "Dopey" Phelps are definite threats at the right halfback slot. They are both fast and are seldom caught from behind on long runs.

I have talked with the coach of the football team in Shelbyville, Ky., where Bob Green played high school football. He considered Bob as good a prospect as his brother, Jack Green, who was captain of Army's great team last fall.

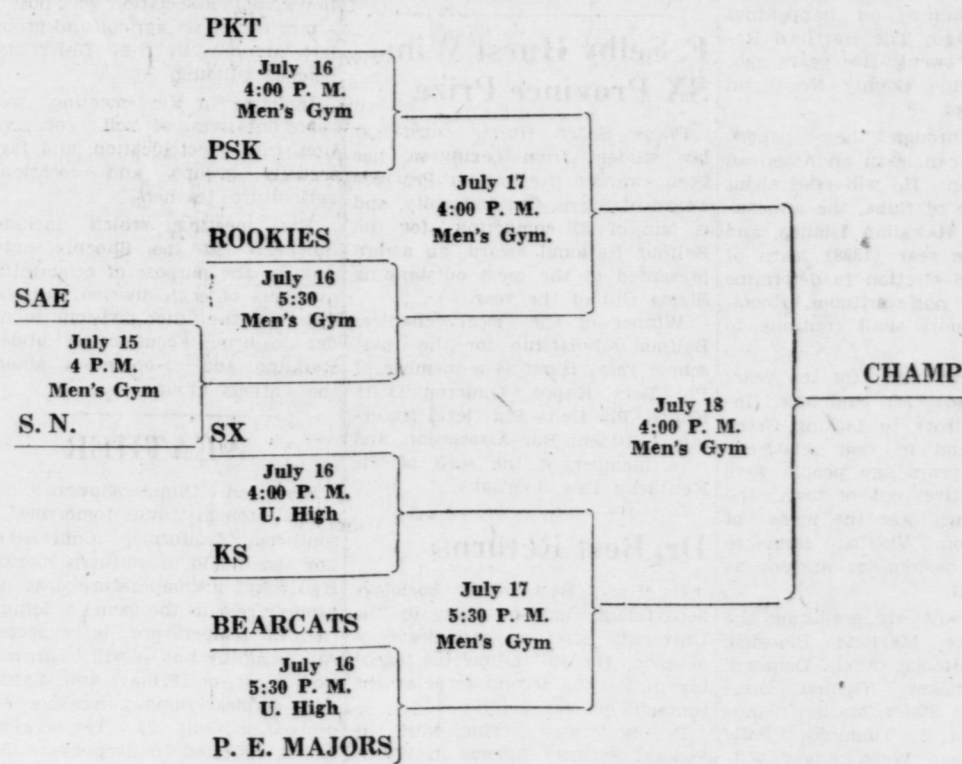

Coach Bryant and backfield coach Frank Moseley have been using many combinations in the backfield in an attempt to select the starters for the coming season. Many of the freshmen have looked good and may be included on the first team.

who had not played off their games to do so immediately. The rain has delayed tennis play and golf to some extent. Therefore McCubbin has extended deadline dates accordingly. However, all matches must be played at the end of the first term and results turned in to the office.

Deadline date on the second round tennis singles has been extended until today. Third round singles will have to be played off by Tuesday, July 16. The semifinals will follow July 17 and the finals July 18. All contestants are urged to cooperate in meeting the dates so that no one will have to be eliminated.

In golf, Coach McCubbin has extended the second round golf singles until today, and the third round until next Tuesday. Finals in the singles will still be played July 18. The first round doubles date was pushed off until today also. Finals must still be played by Monday. Please contact your Summer football practice will culminate tonight on Stoll Field with an intersquad game between the Blues and Whites. The game scheduled to start at 7:15 will be open to the public, and admission will be free. In the event of rain as occurred on the night of the last Blue-White game, the contest will be postponed until Saturday night. Coach Bryant said this would be done in order to give the new men a chance to play their first game on a dry field.

The squad of 60 men who have been practicing every afternoon for the past few weeks, have been divided into two teams, with Coaches Carmie Laslie and Mike Baltisaris commanding the Whites and Joe Atkinson and Frank Moseley in charge of the Blues. Coach Bryant plans to sit back and watch the over all picture as he did before.

The coaching staff for tonight's game is divided the same as it was for the last Blue-White contest. That game was played on a soggy field and remained scoreless for three quarters. Then the Blue team clicked for a touchdown on a pass from Charlie Kuhn to "Dopey" Phelps. Phelps accounted for the extra point on a place kick.

Tonight's game was scheduled to give the freshman candidates a chance to get into some real action, and to give the coaching staff a final look at each man. With the fighting spirit that the boys have been showing in practice, it promises to be a good game.

The coaches believe they have a rather good idea of what each man can do, but want to see them once when the chips are down before they close practice for the summer. They have been working hard with the squad that at first numbered 101, and are pleased with the way some of the men have developed, and the promise that others show. Coach Bryant added, "We are going to have to play some of these kids, before forming a definite opinion."

He went on to say that for freshmen men we had quite a few boys that any school in the conference would like to have on their freshman team. "However," he emphasized, "As far as I know we'll probably be the only school in the conference that will start freshmen."

Bryant brought out that freshmen who haven't seen action in college play, naturally will not be as finished players as the seasoned players that the teams on Kentucky's schedule have. But after a season's experience they should be a good lot of boys. However, the boys have splendid fighting spirit and a determination to win.

This determination and competitive spirit promise to make tonight's game worth while seeing. Here is the roster for both teams:
